The 2015–16 academic year opened with a total student enrollment of 1,918, including 1,608 full-time undergraduate students. Significant initiatives at the College from the past year include the following achievements:

- Lebanon Valley College turned 150 years old. The celebration began with a Founders Day event, which featured Sesquicentennial Celebration: For the 150th Anniversary Celebration. It was written and performed by Dr. Justin Morell, assistant professor of music.

- Lebanon Valley College received the largest gift in the College’s history this spring when Jeanne Donlevy Arnold H’08 and Edward H. Arnold H’87 committed to a $10 million gift in support of the College’s new health professions building.

- New academic programs were added this year, as faculty approved new majors in: Accounting/MBA (accelerated bachelor’s/MBA), Analytical Finance (bachelor’s), Communication Sciences & Disorders (bachelor’s), International Business, and Speech-Language Pathology.

- The great work of the Campus Master Plan Steering Committee has led to the creation of One Campus, the master plan that will guide the College’s physical development during the next decade. A companion to our strategic plan, Envision 2020, One Campus proceeds from a single, but powerful concept: we are one campus, all 358 acres.

- Hannah Pell, a 2016 physics and music graduate, was selected for the prestigious Fulbright Fellowship. She will spend nine months in Austria combining her passion for physics and music for a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

- New to the College’s extensive grant programs this year was the President’s Student Innovation Fund. Nine grants were awarded to 20 students for projects ranging from sustainability and outdoor appreciation to student programming and the arts. Similar to the President’s Innovation Fund, awarded annually to faculty and staff projects, this fund was launched to encourage student-initiated pilot projects.

- Twenty-one of 24 athletic teams competed in postseason play. Men’s ice hockey had returned to NCAA Division III competition this season, and we welcome women’s ice hockey to Lebanon Valley. 99 student-athletes earned their bachelor degrees this past May, with 36 graduating with honors. Four academic All-Americans were featured in the graduating class and 34 all-conference honorees walked across the stage.
